If each motorist would realize that each month in Michigan there are over 1½ billion, vehicle miles of travel, he would realize that safe driving is important. "It just makes sense to drive even more carefully when there is more traffic especially when the records show that in four months 9% more traffic produced 27% more deaths," he said.

Balanced Budget Possible

As the Wall Street Journal puts it, "Congressional and Treasury tax experts think the chances of some tax increase legislation in 1949 are good enough to justify painstaking spade-work on new levies." But, it goes on, whether or not Congress will favor tax boosts won't be known until May, when the annual budget resolution is passed and the lawmakers have a better idea of future income and outgo.

So far, Congress has turned a frowning face on all pleas for higher taxes. The recent downturn in business, with its adverse effect on employment, has tended to strengthen this attitude. A few of the lawmakers have said hopefully that it might even be possible to put modest tax reductions into effect. Senator George, the conservative chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, is strongly opposed to digging deeper into taxpayers' pockets. Representative Doughton, chairman of the equally powerful House Ways and Means Committee, also takes a dim view of higher taxes. But both these key figures, along with a majority of the members of House and Senate, are convinced that a balanced budget is necessary.

The hope is that Congress will trim its sail to the wind—that it will write a budget which can be met by the estimated revenues from the present taxes. The voluminous reports of the Hoover Commission, covering every phase and branch of the Federal Government, are designed to show specifically how the administrative cost of government can be substantially reduced, without in any way imperiling policies and functions. If the reports were accepted in toto, and their recommendations adopted, the annual savings would be about $3,000,000,000—more than enough to cover any conceivable present deficit.

LUMBER

COSTS LESS

AT YOUNGSTOWN!

AND HERE IS PROOF!

There is no substitute for quality where lumber is concerned. A new home is no better than the framing lumber used even if it is not exposed. Properly seasoned materials are essential in building to prevent sagging, warping, cracked plaster etc., in your new home.

Our lumber is selected from the finest of Western and Canadian stock and is manufactured by the best mills. Every piece of lumber in our yards is thoroughly seasoned and properly sized. We sell only dry and fully surfaced lumber. When you make price comparisons, be sure to compare quality as well.

A True Story About Shingles!

Early this year when we began to build additional warehouse space we found it necessary to store a large quantity of roofing materials in a temporary warehouse space, expecting later on to move it into another warehouse. Now we find ourselves in the Spring rush of business . . . we need the space but we don't have the time to move the shingles. SO, in order to get them out of their present storage space we are willing to slash prices. When this supply is gone and we restock, the prices will revert back to the original which is at least 20% higher! For these items there is the same price to everyone. All shingles listed on this offer will be sold on a cash and carry basis ONLY. You must pick them up at our Warehouse to take advantage of these low prices! Dealers and Contractors are welcome!

Ben's Not Like That

By GERTRUDE WINDERS

"YOU'RE a wonder, Anne." However, Ben Harmon was smiling not at her but at the blue print she'd worked on, far into the night. Ben drew wacky sketches of houses he dreamed up and Anne made the blue prints that "sold" people his ideas, revised.

Anne said eagerly, "I've cut out some of the windows. You forgot that the Brantons want a lot of wall space for pictures." She waited for more praise. And waited.

Ben scooped up the blue print. "I gave a good deal of time to putting those windows exactly where they ought to be," he muttered, "but since you mention it, Mrs. Branton did say something about hanging Branton's latest atrocities. Hanging's too good for them. . . . So long, beautiful."

Before Ben went to the Navy they were almost engaged. She was the one who had been uncertain. She was uncertain no longer. The plastic T square in her fingers shook. "Nothing I say or do seems to please him anymore," she whispered. "What is the matter with Ben?" The voice of the new receptionist in the outer office floated to her in mocking answer. "Oh Ben, you're wonderful!"

Anne stiffened, listening for Ben's answer. She could hear only the deep rumble of his voice.

Anne could imagine how Marvella looked as she said it, eyes fluttering, wide silly smile. Anne smoothed her brown page boy bob. Marvella was a synthetic blond. Surely Ben wouldn't—

"Mrs. Branton is on the university board," Ben was saying. "If she likes this house we'll have a good chance at the university's new chap

"I'VE another idea about the cottage." He spread a crumpled sketch on her drawing board. We'll build the house in the hill. That gives an old-world broken roof line with the slope for background."

Anne, studying the sketch, felt her heart sink. His notion was impossible.

"It would be beautiful," murmured Anne, "but wouldn't every room be on a different level?" She must be tactful.

"That's part of the charm!" "It means stepping up and down, and Mrs. Branton is old—" "Nonsense. She just sits and knits while he paints."

"It'll be wonderful," put in Marvella.

Ben's voice was sharp "You're all wet on this, Anne."

"The cottage will be wet, you mean, poked under the hill that way." Her temper was rising. "You know we decided last week that the only place for the house was on top of the hill. That cuts out the hill problem and the house gets a breeze. You have a level stretch—" "Okay," shouted Ben, "but I'll wager Branton won't think so. The door banged on him."

"When she said, 'How wonderful, how clever of you to think of that,' he beamed at her."

She'd lost him. A fog of misery closed over her. She tried to tell herself that if she couldn't have Ben on an honest basis, she didn't want him. That didn't help. It wasn't true. She wished she'd lied and gushed.

He phoned her. "Branton is crazy about my idea."

"Artists are always crazy," she retorted, blinking back tears.

Ben's step behind her was a surprise. She hadn't expected him to come back to the office that night. "Congratulations," she said, without turning her head, and felt two hands firm on her shoulders.

"For what?" asked Ben softly. "For being a dope? Anne, what would I do without you?"

"Didn't Branton—" Anne began, dazed.

Ben turned her around and grinned down at her. "Mrs. Branton picked the house on top of the hill," he explained. "She said, 'My husband hasn't a practical bone in his head. Will you say that about me some day? We make a swell team, honey. What do you say?'"

Anne didn't say anything for Ben's lips, warm and firm, were on hers.

TROUT STAMP AS NECESSARY AS LICENSE

For the trout fisherman, the 1949 trout stamp is every bit as necessary as the fishing license. The law requires both of them, conservation department officials point out.

The trout stamp is a supplemental license to take brook, brown and rainbow trout, and it must be attached to the regular fishing license.

Trout stamp revenue is earmarked specifically for the propagation and planting of trout in trout streams.

This prescription can make a healthy nation sick

There is talk of giving the people more "security" by extending government control to medical care. It is nice talk — but it doesn't make for a nice future. Europe is full of tragic examples of people running to the government for security, only to find that the more it got, the sicker the nation became. Your doctor has nothing to lose from compulsory health insurance; he would have a guaranteed practice with guaranteed pay — and all the prerogatives of a bureaucratic life. But how about YOU — you, the person who pays with a shrunken take-home wage? Will you be better off — or worse? Get under all this "nice" talk, and see where you end up. Let your doctor give you the real facts about government controlled medicine so that you can weigh the ugly side of it as well as the sugar-coated promises.

For a while it looked like we'd have to put up parking meters. Folks working in town—including some of the store owners—were taking up all of the space along Main Street.

Farmers coming in to shop never found a place to park, and sometimes had to lug stuff a half mile or so. Some started to do their buying in other towns. Finally, store owners and farmers had a get-together—with the result that the empty field near the depot was fixed up for all-day parkers.

Now farmers get their shopping done comfortably, and the merchants have a better place to park than they had before. Just took a little friendly co-operation to make everybody happy.

From where I sit, most differences can be ironed out by just talking things over—maybe with a cup of coffee or glass of beer—and seeing the other person's side of it. Next time you have a problem or a little difference to settle, why not try just that?
